GEN. HERNANDEZ ARRESTED.

CHARGES AGAINST A VENEZUELAN OFFICER.

THE COMPLAINTS AGAINST HIM MADE BY G. F. UNDERHILL, FORMERLY U. S. CONSUL AT BOLIVAR, AND HIS WIFE-BAIL SE-CURED IN TIME FOR THE GENERAL

TO CATCH A STEAMER FOR HIS HOME.

One of the most interesting and unusual stories of ies in South America has just been made known through a suit brought into the Suprem Court by George F. Underhill, formerly superintennt of the famous El Callao gold mines of Venezuela, and for six years Consul of the United States at the port of Bolivar. The complaint is against General Jose Manuel Hernandez, a promiment officer of the Republic of Venezuela, during the last week has been in the city.

The complaint is an extraordinary one. General Hernandez, an officer in the army of a foreign Power, is arrested while travelling in this country and held in $15,000 ball for an offence committed in time of war in his country against private individuals of this country. Two charges are made, one by Mr. Underhill on which $50,000 damages for business losses are asked, and one by Mrs. Under-hill on which $25,900 personal damages are sought. The story told by the papers in the suit reads like a novel of adventure. In the summer of 1892 Mr. and Mrs. Underhill were living at Bolivar. Mr. Underhill was the owner and manager of the waterworks system of that city. NOT ALLOWED TO LEAVE THE COUNTRY.

In August, before General Crespo, the present President of Venezuela, had established the revolutionary cause in that country, General Hernandez, at the head of a band of revolutionary followers, ceeded in defeating the Government troops un-General Santos Carrera, near the City of Bolivar, and in killing the latter. As soon as the success of Hernandez was known in Bolivar, Mr. and Mrs. Underhill, being warned, prepared to depart, but a mob was formed of the partisans of Hernandez under great excitement against Underhill because he had repaired the steamer Nutrias for the Government, although doing it under compulation ernment, although doing it under compuls and maintaining his neutrality in every way. The b, at the point of the pistol, compelled Mr. and Mrs. Underbill to disembark from the boat in which they were about to sail, outrageously maltreated them and hustled them through the streets, tearing the clothes from their backs, until they managed to escape into a house. Mr. Underhill was then cast into a fithy jail, but was afterward released through the fearless efforts of his wife.

"General Hernandez entered the city the next day and took entire control of it and of all its affairs, calling himself "military delegate." Mr. and Mrs. Underhill were confined to their own house, Armed guards were placed about it and cannon trained They were imprisoned there for two nths, not even daring to approach the windows, and their supplies were largely cut off. Finally the use was demanded of them for the use of troops. Frequent demands were made upon General Hernandez to allow them, as American citizens, to leave the country, but all these demands were refused. Later Mr. Underhill became dangerously ill. Finally the sale of the waterworks business was demanded of Mr. Underhill, the sum offered being 8,000 pesos, equivalent to about $6,000. He refused. It had cost him $75,000, and was worth $100,000. He was told that a United States gunboat would never be able to get him out of the city unless he sold the business. The offer then declined to 6,500 pesos, about $5,000. Under this extreme duress he was obliged to surrender his waterworks-all he had in the world-and was then immediately allowed to depart.

THE GENERAL ARRIVED HERE LAST SATURDAY. General Hernandez, against whom these charges are brought, arrived in New-York from Paris last Saturday. For some months he has been travelling With him was his adjutant, Redro Hernandez. They have been staying at the Victoria Hotel. It was from that place that General Herandez was taken yesterday morning in custody of Deputy Sheriffs Walgering and Donevan. A war rant for his arrest had been issued by Judge Cullen, of Brooklyn, and the bail placed at $15,000.

Admission to Hernandez's room was gained only by strategy. It was managed by a reporter. A card was sent to the General. At first he refused to be seen, but later consented. The deputy sheriff, Donovan, accompanied the reporter. "Who are you?" asked the man who opened the door to ad-

"I am a sheriff." said Donovan, "and I have come to arrest General Hernandez." As he spoke where am to got an excitement.

General Hernandez was taken to the Sheriff's office. He had sent for friends, Cadenas & Co., commission merchants, of No. 58 William-st., and Mr. Cadenas met him at the Sheriff's office, and offered as ball a certified check for $15,000, which was accepted. The matter was transacted with great dispatch. General Hernandez has twenty days in which to answer the charges. He secured as his counsel Coudert Brothers, and was then driven to the Pierrepont Stores, Brooklyn, where he caught, with only a minute to spare, the steamer Caracas, sailing for Venezuela. THE GENERAL'S SIDE OF THE CASE.

While at the Sheriff's office General Hernandez said that the trouble with Underhill occurred while General Hernandez was under arms for the present forces captured Bolivia, Underhill had shut the supply. The trouble between himself and Un-derhill had been in the civil courts of Venezuela derhill had been in the civil courts of Venezuela and had also been brought to the notice of Captain Crowninshield, of the United States steamer Kearsarge. Captain Crowninshield had looked into the matter and had exonerated him.

At the office of Cadenas & Co., Mr. Cadenas said yesterday: "The arrest of General Hernandez is a great indignity. In the first place the charges of Mr. Underhill and of his wife are denied in toto. General Hernandez was acting under military orders, and he can hardly be held personally responsible for what he did in the service of his Government. Underhill had a contract to supply the city with water, he did not do it, and he was made to sell the works to one Tomassi, a representative of the Government.

"General Hernandez is one of the heroes of works to one Tomassi, a representative of the Government.

"General Hernandez is one of the heroes of his country. The people call him 'Mocho,' which means 'maimed.' He has been a great fighter, and has many sears and wounds. Wherever he goes he is received with enthusiasm by the people. He was a member of the Constitutional Assembly, which met at Caraccas after the establishment of the Revolutionary Government. He had always been an enemy of Blanco and Palacio, and his services were of the first importance in overthrowing the rule of the latter. "General Hernandez feels very bitter toward Underhill, though he admires Americans generally. This whole matter will undoubtedly come before the Venezuelian Government, and the United States will probably be asked to make what reparation seems just."

the Venezuellan Government, and the United States will probably be asked to make what reparation seems just."

Mr. Underhill was seen at his home, No. 269 Forty-fifth-st. Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon, His story, supplemented by the story of his wife, was full of interesting and exciting details. He gave a vividness to the story of their capture and imprisonment which would have fired the blood of any free man. The real cause of their imprisonment, Mr. Underhill says, was his refusal to repair a steamer for Hernandez. Underhill says he did not want to be mixed up in their revolutionary affairs, and so refused to work for either side. His story of Hernandez's entry into Bolivia at the head of a force of "the scum of the country" was most graphic. The general, he says, had been in prison in Bolivia, but had escaped. He gathered about him 1,500 troops. They were called "El legallistas," or, from their arms, the "sacred order of Winchester men." They were for Crespo, and as the Revolutionists were gaining, the people flocked to their standard.

The present suits are brought as personal claims against General Hernandez, but it is understood that Mr. Underhill will make the matter the basis of an international claim against Venezuela. Mr. Underhill is represented by Logan, Clark & Demond.

A SHORT LIST OF CRANKS.

In District-Attorney Nicoll's mail yesterday was letter, dated Friday and signed J. Henry King, in which $10,000 was demanded. The writer said wanted $5,600 in $5 bills and the rest in $2 bills. He did not call.

A crank, who said he was a painter by trade, was ordered out of town by the Hastings authorities on Friday evening. He was looking for Chauncey M. Depew. He first attracted attention by ordering all the trees in the town cut down. Then the police took hold of him and ran him out of town.

Edward Daley, a young Irishman living at Second-ave, and Sixtieth-st., was committed to the Island for six months yesterday as being a dangerous crank. At 4 o'clock Friday afternoon he entered the real estate office of Byron O'Hara, his uncle, at No. 1,145 Second-ave., and demanded 500, saying: "If you don't give it to me I'll fill you full of lead!" O'Hara, who disliked the idea of being shot, turned to his nephew and said: "You shall have it. Wait here until I get it."
O'Hara hastily summoned Policeman Sampson, of the East Sixty-seventh-st, station, who took Daley into custody without any trouble. When arraigned in court Daley laughed over his proceedings of Friday, saying: "I suppose I'm a crank now, but it was only booze that was talking. I've been drunk for the past four days."

SHE PLUNGED INTO THE CANAL.

MRS. JAY, WHO SAYS SHE IS THE WIFE OF A COMMISSIONER OF DEEDS AT SCRAN-TON, TIRED OF LIFE.

She said she was on her way from her house to New-York, where she had been undergoing treatment. She got off the 9:15 o'clock train on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Rallroad and proceeded in the direction of Mainst. She lingered, she says, for some time on the swinging bridge which crosses the canal and then plunged into the water. Officer Somers heard the splash and jumped in and rescued the woman. Mrs. Jay refuses to talk of the affair other than to say that she is tired of life.

Coroner Schultze and twelve jurymen went up to the wrecked stables in Fourteenth-st. yesterday morning. They went thoroughly over the place, and at the end of their inspection the Coroner announced that the inquest would be held on Friday, November 17.

CHARGED WITH SHOOTING A BOY.

HIS BROTHER OFFICERS DO NOT BELIEVE THAT JAMES G. COOPER, JR., SENT THE BIRD SHOT INTO YOUNG DULLIN'S LEG.

Police Sergeant James G. Cooper, jr., of the Thirty-fourth Precinct, in Tremont, was arrested and suspended from duty Friday, on a peculiar charge of felonious assault, but was yesterday returned to duty. It is alleged that last Tuesday night Sergeant Cooper shot in the leg, with fine bird-shot, Frederick Dullin, twelve years old, a son of Richard Dullin, employed by the New-York Central Railroad Company. Sergeant Cooper and his wife and three young sons live at First-ave, and McLean-st., and Dullin lives near by in Second-ave. On Tuesday evening young Dullin and five other boys started out to forage for fuel for election night bonfires. The boys were running and shouting, and when they were near Sergeant Cooper's house the report of a gun was heard. Dullin cried out that he was shot, and all his comrade: ran away and deserted him except Robert Paul Sergeant Cooper took Paul to his house, who says that he saw a double-barreled gun in the hallway, and that Sergeant Cooper kept him in the cellar and that Sergeant Cooper kept him in the cellar for more than an hour. Sergeant Cooper denies imprisoning the boy in the cellar.

Meanwhile, a boy named Jacob Armstrong had assisted Dullin to his home, where a doctor extracted several shot from his leg. The wounds are not considered dangerous unless blood-poisoning should set in. On the following night a gang of ruffans waylaid Sergeant Cooper to avenge the alleged shooting, but he quickly put them to flight. The case was reported to Superintendent Byrnes, and yesterday Cooper, in the Morrisania Police Court, was admitted to bail. He was immediately restored to duty. Sergeant Cooper strenuously denies having shot young Dullin, and says that the charge is made because he complained to Dullin's schoolteacher that Dullin had been annoying his sons, and the teacher expelled Dullin from school. Sergeant Cooper is an extremely popular officer. He has been on the police force since 1876. His brother officers speak of him in the highest terms. They say he is kindhearted, never drinks, and is an exemplary officer. They do not believe the charge against him.

FEATURES OF THE CANDY SHOW.

Preparations for the opening of the Candy Exposition at the Lenox Lyceum to-morrow night promise that the show will be complete when the doors open. Messrs. Russell and Buckley, the managers, have been untiring in efforts, and exhibitors have been prompt in getting ready. From come to arrest General Hernandez." As he spoke he pushed by the man at the door into the General's room. There were half a dozen people there. Hernandez was just dressing. There was confusion at Donovan's words. The General himseld laughed, "What for?" he asked through an interpreter. The payers were read to him. As the charges were made he grew red in the face, and controlled himself only with difficulty.

"I am just about to start for Venezuela. I shall miss my steamer. Can I not have bail at once? Where am I to go?" All of this was said in great excitement.

A BRIDGE CAR LEAVES THE TRACK.

An accident on the Brooklyn Bridge cable road blocked passenger traffic for some time yesterday morning. Shortly before 6 o'clock car No. 39, rear car in a train which was being switched at the Brooklyn end of the Bridge, was thrown directly across the track. It took a wrecking crew more than an hour of hard work with blocks, crew more than an hour of hard work with blocks, tackles and pulleys to place the car on the rails again. Before travel was resumed people had crowded both ends of the Bridge, so that police were stationed at the gates to keep more from entering the piatforms. Engine No. 6 pulled out the first train, which was crowded to suffocation, after the accident, but was obliged to return, as there was not enough steam to push the loaded cars over the slippery rails, and it was some time before regular traffic was resumed.

It is not necessary for Diana to stand on the summit of the tower of the Madison Square Garden to indicate which way the wind blows in that locality these November days in New-York. Everybody knows she has wind enough to take care of in Chicago; and beautifully she has looked and gracefully she has curved, all during the period of the Exposition, above the Agricultural Hall, by the side of the waters of Lake Michigan. Her honors and her reputation were won on Manhattan Island before she was transferred to Jackson Park, and when visitors to that place saw her pointing hither and thither from her lofty perch they relied upon her with a confidence that was sublime for assurance as to the direction whence the wind was really blowing. She was not only pleasant to look upon, but she had borne with her to her new station the crown of the arc of metropolitan approval of her beauty and faith in her works; hence the degree of confidence her presence inspired.

But as to the drift of the winds in the neighborhood of Madison Square Garden, and without further reference, except in a generally sympathetic way, to Diana, who is still in Chicago, the followers of society's doings do not need to be reminded that the currents are all setting in the direction of the northeast door of the garden.

W. SEWARD WEBB. LAWRENCE KIP. Here a procession of animals, far exceeding in numbers and beauy of outline, though lacking in variety of species, those assembled by Noah of old, will, within the space of one week, begin their stately march between the jambs and across and underneath the sills of that broad door, which, like all other entrances, does not invariably lead to triumph and glory. Some of these same animals will issue forth at the end of seven days with prize blue ribbons fluttering on their jaws. Some will cross the threshold on the way to their rustic retreats with commonplace red braid doing up their tails, the animals themselves having previously been done up generally in competition with their fellows. But all will have served their purpose in the great contests, just as the individual performs his part in human affairs.

If the inferior animal had not been placed by the side of his superior the greater qualities in the latter class might have remained in obscurity. tory it can be won only through the process of contest and comparison; hence the humbler animal has performed his simple function, even though it may have been to the glory of his natural superior and the temporary overshadowing of his own individual merits in his particular field of usefulness.

daisy-spangled meadows, hillsides all aglow with the bloom of the golden rod, and mountains ablaze with autumnal plumage, done its furs and feathers, its topcoats and glistening tiles and swings into the grarish light of the Horse Show arena, whereon the curtain rises upon the preiude to the winter season's programme of amusements.

And beautiful it all is to look upon, and few escape the meshes of its net of attractions. This year, more than any which has passed, the Horse Show will fulfil every promise and reward the patron for his outlay of money and time. The familiar faces of gentiemen who have bonestly striven to advance the highest interests of the turf will be seen. In the minds of some people the very mention of the horse is deemed sufficient basis for a demand to eject all of his species from its rightful place as an object of admiration in the animal kingdom. None of the horses conspicuous as actual scrambiers for place on gambling race-tracks appear in this high-toned annual exhibition of the National Horse Show Association. There is no need for the upward turning of the nose at the mention of the name of any horse who will stand in his stall or in the competitive arena at Madison Square Garden next week. There are some poople who smile and wink their eyes in complete satisfaction over a free luncheon, consisting of a plate of stale cabbage, and consider it a feast. Representatives of this class would not feel themselves at home at the board of an honest toller who provided them with the luxury of roast beef, poststoes and white bread, because the provident outlay would be beyond their natural and ordinary reach. So it is with the Horse Show annually given in this city. The contests for prizes are made in contempt of all laxity of that principle in pursuance of which the best may be bestowed upon the lowest and most unworthy.

THE GROWTH OF THE ASSOCIATION.

The National Horse Show Association has nersistently striven to elevate its annual exhibitions above the waste of gambling wreckage. It has reached beyond, ignoring all that sought to touch above the waste of gambling wreckage. It has reached beyond, ignoring all that sought to touch the institution with debasing fingers, and has provided for the offering of the best, for inspection by those who entertain a gracious affection for the most useful, the most beautiful, and the most appreciative, in his mute way, of all the dumb creatures drafted into the service of mankind.

The Horse Show will open on Monday, November 13, and continue for one week. The list of prizes has already been published; so has the list of entries. To-day The Tribune publishes pictures of some of the men who have contributed to the promotion of that which is already assured, the success of the ninth annual exhibition of the National Horse Show Association of America.

A meeting of the directors of the National Horse Show Association of America.

A meeting of the directors of the National Horse Show Association, held on Friday, resulted in the election of Colonel Lawrence Kip, first vice-president: George Peabody Wetmore, second vice-president, and John G. Heckscher, secretary.

The office of second vice-president is a new creation. Mr. Heckscher has been vice-president of the association, with the additional fittle of secretary. He has, however, been only acting as secretary in place of W. F. Wharton. Now he enters upon the duties of secretary in fact. His office of vice-president carries with it no salary or other emoluments. As an enthusiastic lover of the interests he serves, Mr. Heckscher assumes, active duties in connection with the work of the organization and detail, and every one linterested in or in sympathy with the objects of the National Horse Show Association will be glad to hear it. He is uncommonly popular and widely known.

A GUNBOAT ON THE OHIO.

A BRANCH OF THE NAVAL RESERVE FOR PITTS-BURG-WILL HAVE TO USE FLATBOATS.

Pittsburg, Penn., Nov. 3 (Special).-The formation of a local branch of the Pennsylvania Naval Reserve is quite a novelty for a city 500 miles distant from the Atlantic Ocean. Picture a gunboat on the Monongahela River. It is to be built, however, and the Commonwealth will pay the bill. The depth of water registered here is only six feet. Beyond the Davis Island dam, four miles below Pittsburg, there is only two feet five inches of water, yet the hulls of warships during the struggle of 1812 were built at Elizabeth, thirty miles further up the Monongahela River from Pittsburg, and floated down on freshets to New Orleans, where they were rigged and armed for service. Warships built at Elizabeth, 2,000 miles north of New Orleans, have sailed clear around the globe. Of course they were pigmy affairs compared with the armor-clad cruiser of 1893. In the Civil War a great many gunboats, fully equipped and ready for service, were built right at the Pittsburg river front. They were the regular Mississippi River gunboat. Besides many Pittsburg river steamers engaged in towing coal south were seized by the United States authorities at Louisville and Cairo and converted into "tin clads," and used as dispatch and supply boats.

This is about as close connection as Pittsburg could establish with maritime affairs. It has scores of captains and commodores in the river service. Besides, it has furnished its complement of students to the Annapolis Naval Academy, and is the birthplace and home of many genuine ocean sailors, active and retired. Lieutenant-Com-mander Reiter, United States Navy, is a Pittsburger, and spends all his furloughs here, while Dr. W. H. Winslow was once Lieutenant Winslow, United States Navy, The novelty of the Naval Reserve has attracted all the young men of Pittsburg. There was a tremendous rush to join; only about sixty-one applicants were accepted at the initial meeting. Two divisions of the 1st Battalion have been organized in Philadelphia. A fourth division is in ganization is to protect the commerce and business of the city along the river fronts at the call of the Governor, and in time of war to furnish experienced men to the United States Navy for petty or non-commissioned officers. A United States naval officer will be detailed for instruction, and he will begin work within two weeks. There will be weekly drills during the winter months in accordance with United States regulations. Each year, during the summer, the di-vision will have at least eight days' instruction

Plans for the proposed river boat have already been submitted by Tom Rees's Sons of Pittsburg, and other designs will be furnished by the Cramps, of Philadelphia. Rees's Sons have in the last ten years built numerous light-draught vessels for South American rivers, and they launched one here last summer for a New-York firm for one here last summer for a New-York firm for Central American trade. These boats, after steaming down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, are stanch enough to cross the Gulf of Mexico, although some of the most fragile craft have been shipped in sections and put together at the end of the journey.

Of necessity, the Pittsburg Naval Reserve boat will be of light draught, with machinery and wheel protected and a fighting mast, which can be lowered for bridges. Armament will be furnished by the United States Government, and each man will be equipped with a rifle, a cutlass and a revolver. Adjutant-General Greenland, of the State Militia, was present at the initial meeting, and Major A. J. Logan, of the State Guards, had been detailed to conduct the organization, assisted by Dr. W. F. Robeson, surgeon of the lath Regiment. Division C will be the official title of the Pittsburg section of the Pennsylvania Navy.

Dr. Robeson has been elected lieutenant-commander, and he will sever his connection with the 18th Regiment, as will Dr. S. O. Brumbaugh, who has been elected one of the two ensigns, the other being A. L. Pearson, jr., son of ex-Major-General A. L. Pearson,

FLOWER SHOWS IN INDIA.

From Hearth and Home.

The display of flowers at a flower show in India is naturally very magnifisent. In one recently held in Poona and opened by Lady Harris, the chief in Peona and opened by Lady Harris, the chief interest was attached to the arrangement of cut flowers and to table decoration. Lady Harris competed in the latter, and, of course, being so devoted to cricket, had two cricketers supporting the three-branch lamp in the centre of her table, which was an arrangement in scarlet and green. The first prize was awarnied to Mrs. Whitworth, for a blue-and-white table, the centre spread and the ice plate being pale blue, and the flowers used white zinziber, the bridal or snow creeper, white hibiscus and maldenhair fern. The second prize fell to a table decorated with nothing but the Glarisa superba, and rushes mixed with silk of the yellow hue seen when the flower opens. Another lady had for centre a white swan floating in water and bordered with broken swan eggs. The judges were two ladies who did not compete and whose names were judiciously kept secret. In the basket of flowers competition, the most original was one formed of hollow bamboos of different sizes, artistically filled with flowers, grasses and creepers. Another lady requisitioned a real hornest's nest as receptacle for her flowers. Very gorgeous, Indeed, were the fine tables decorated by native butlers, which were a perfect blaze of color, especially yellow.

A CONDUCTOR OF AN IRON MOUNTAIN TRAIN

LOSES HIS LIFE LIKE A HERO. Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 4.—The southbound Iron Mountain train, No. 51, was held up by seven masked bandits at Oliphant, a small station seven miles north of Newport, at 10 o'clock last night. As soon as the train was brought to a standstill the gang began firing at once into the express. the gang began firing at once into the express car, and a panic occurred among the crew and passengers. Conductor W. P. McNally, however, according to one story, bravely rushed out to the platform and fired into the attacking party. His fealty to his employers cost him his life, as his shots were returned, and he fell mortally wounded. The express messenger was overpowered without much trouble and the safe forced open and emptied of its contents. When through with the express car the robbers turned their attention to the car the rothers turned their attention to the passenger coaches, and those who had not hidden their valuables were quickly relieved of them.

One report says the robbers were on the train when it left Newport at 9:40 p. m., and when it slowed up for Oliphant they arose from their seats and commanded the passengers to throw up their and commanded the passengers to throw up their hands. The passengers complied, but Conductor McNally opened fire on the robbers without effect, when they returned fire, shooting him down. He died in a few minutes. The passengers were looted, oled in a few minutes. The passengers were looted, and the bandits then turned to the express car. It is believed the greater portion of the booty was secured from the passengers, as this train seldom ever carries any large amounts.

After robbing the train the outlaws galloped off in the darkness, and the train proceeded on into Little Rock.

The train reached this city early this morning, and the passengers tell some interesting stories of the robbery. The robbers would not take anything from the women or from workingmen. They also told the passengers that they wanted only good watches, Cheap ones were handed back. Captain McNally acted the part of a hero. He saved many from losing their money by quickly advising them to hide it, and bravely fought the robbers with his revolver. After robbing the southbound train the robbers forced the porter of that train to flag the northbound "Cannonball" as it passed, but it failed to stop.

northbound "Cannonball" as it passed, but it failed to stop.

A sheriff's posse caught up with the robbers in a sparsely settled section of Independence County shortly before noon to-day. The bandits showed fight, and fired a volley at the posse. The fire was returned, and the battle raged for nearly half an hour. Three of the bandits were badly wounded, and holsted a handkerchief as a flag of truce. The sheriff's posse advanced and placed three of them under arrest. The others escaped, but will probably be captured before night, as the officers started in hot pursuit.

The body of McNally will be shipped to-night to Cleveland, Ohio, where he formerly lived.

THIEVES AT WORK IN JACKSON PARK

THEFT OF A $1.500 UPRIGHT PIANO-NOTES OF THE LATE EXPOSITION.

Chicago, Nov. 4.-Expert thieves are at work in Jackson Park and are getting away with some costly exhibits in spite of the guards, secret service officers and official regulations. The biggest theft since the Fair closed occurred yesterday in the Manufactures Building. A fancy inlaid upright plane, valued at $1,500, which has been packed ready for removal, was taken out of the exhibitors' pavilion under the noses of the guards by the thieves, who presented a forged permit to take it out. No trace of the instrument has been found. The force of guards has been reduced too much to afford proper protection to exhibitors. Many smaller thefts have been reported by exhibitors in the Manufactures and Agricultural buildings, as well as in some of the foreign and State buildings. Nearly all the doors in the departmental buildings have been boarded up, and some of the buildings have been closed to visitors entirely. Every person carrying small or large packages is required to produce written authority before being allowed to pass out.

W. I. Buchanan, chief of the agricultural, livestock and forestry departments, was the guest of exhibitors in those departments to-day. This was the last official incident of the late exhibition. A reception was originally planned for last Tuesday night, on an elaborate scale, to include women and dancing, but Mayor Harrison's assassination intervened. Several hundred exhibitors assembled in the gallery of the Agricultural Building to say farewell to the chief as well as to each other, and to show for the second time their appreciation of the popular lowa man's services in their behalf.

Major Panghorn, prasident of the Associated

Major Pangborn, president of the Associated American Exhibitors, received a telegram to-day from Secretary Gresham, informing him that President Cleveland had signed the bill which Congress passed at its special session providing for the awarding of special diplomas for skilled artisans who had worked on goods. This is the plan which was championed by the Board of Lady Managers and the Associated American Exhibitors.

CHASING THE WHALE BY STEAM.

UNPRECEDENTED CATCH OF THE ARCTIC PLEET -SAILING VESSELS " NOT IN IT."

New-Bedford, Mass., Nov. 4.-Private dispatches received in this city confirming the reports of the unprecedented catch of the whi the Arctic are cheering to the local whaling mer-chants, who had begun to fear that the season would prove a failure The report up to October 9 was to the effect that out of forty-three vessels in the Arctic, eighteen were clean. Despite the fact that the season has been a phenomenal one, the sailing vessels have done nothing at all comparatively, the steamers having had all the luck. When the little steamer Mary D. Hume took thirty whales two years ago, the news could scarcely be believed. Now the report that the steamer Narwhal has taken sixty-two whales is simply wonderful. Add to this the fact that the Baelena has taken fifty-two whales, the Grampus, forty-seven; the Newport, thirty-seven; the Orca, twenty-five; the Karluck, eighteen; the Belvidere, seventeen; the Mary D. Hume, fourteen, and the Navarch, eleven, and the year proves to be the best in the history of whaling. The steamers Baelena, Grampus, Karluck, Mary D. Hume and Narwhal are still shut in in the Arctic ice, so these vessels will winter there this year. Local merchants think the price of bone will range at about $3 a pound.

A BEDIAMONED BURGLAR CAUGHT. Camden, N. J., Nov. 4 (Special).-After the safe had been blown open and the building shattered, ex-Sheriff Gibbs's son William, of Clementon Camden County, shoved the muzzle of a gun in the grist mill this morning. About 2 o'clock Mrs. Gibbs heard a noise like a muffled explosion, and called her son William, a sturdy and fearless young fellow, to investigate. The noise came from the direction of the mill, and, seizing a shotgun, the direction of the mill, and, seizing a shotgun, young Gibbs rushed toward that building and arrived just in time to arrest a burglar as he was leaving the mill. Constable Streeten was sent for, and the robber was committed to jail. The burglar is a short, thick-set man, possibly thirty years old. He was stylishly dressed in a brown suit, and wore patent-leather gaiters, over which were rubbers. On his hand were two handsome diamond rings, and a diamond shirt-stud glistened on his shirt-front. In his pockets were found a costly watch and chain, about $60 in money, a loaded revolver and a complete set of burglar's tools. The safe in the mill had been blown open, every window in the building was broken and the building badly shattered. The burglar gave the name of Terence McGrath.

HOKE SMITH'S WORK ON THE PENSION ROLL. Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 4.-To-day the quarterly payment of pensions began here, and the veterans from all over the State flocked to the city to receive checks for their money on the Sub-Treasury at Chicago. A great deal of commotion was caused Chicago. A great deal of commotion was caused among the old soldiers when it was learned that hundreds of them had been dropped from the pension rolls, and the excitement finally ran so high as almost to approach the nature of a small-sized riot. Many of the veterans had paid railroad fares to the city, and they in particular were loud in their denunciations of the Pension Department when they handed in their votchers and were told that they had either been dropped from the rolls or that their claims were under investigation in Washington. The officials here state that some 600 pensions have been dropped since the last quarterly payment. THE STRIKE ON THE " BIG FOUR" GROWING.

Cairo, Ill., Nov. 4 .- The "Big Four" strike was last night declared general, and extends from Cairo to Danville. General Superintendent Van Winke, Division Superintendent Sutton and Trainmaster Slocum were here yesterday and held two conferences with the strikers. The later demanded that Yardmaster Riley and Engineers Hediger and Hall be restored to full pay, also that every employe affected by the 19 per cent reduction of September 1 be reinstated at former salary. The company would not accede to either demand, and the strikers remain firm. When the result of the Mount Carmei meeting less night was made known, the whole Cairo division was ordered out. A carload of men lave been ordered from St. Louis to take the places of the strikers here. Considerable excitement prevails.
